Safety and security information: Arriving and departing from work

Security Services has engaged with UW Health Leaders, University Police, and the Madison Police Department to develop plans for the safe entry and exit of all staff members into and out of our places of work during the proposed work stoppage dates of September 13-16. Our top priority is to ensure our employees feel safe and secure in coming to work in order to provide care to our community.

This 3-page resource document provides FAQs as well as arrival and departure recommendations for staff working at UH, AFCH and EMH.

FREQUENTLY ASKED QUESTIONS

What are we doing to provide support for staff who will not participate in the work stoppage but are worried about retaliation from the union or from colleagues who will be participating?

Answer: No intimidation, coercion or retaliation will be tolerated at UW Health. If you are concerned that you or a colleague may have been subjected to this type of unwanted behavior, you should report it to your next level leader or directly to Employee Relations.

What support will we have for those staff who are worried about crossing the picket line? Will I physically have to push through it to enter my place of work?

Answer: Individuals who choose to picket should not threaten, harass or physically block or stop other employees who are reporting to work. As we learn more details about the protests, our security team will adjust as necessary to support the needs of our staff. Any interference with someone's ability to move freely in or around the facilities will be immediately addressed by security and law enforcement as needed. During the work stoppage there will be additional onsite security resources.

Who do I contact if I encounter a concern on my way in?

Answer: Call Security Services at (608) 890-5555, and Security Services at East Madison Hospital at (608) 440-6666. Call 9-1-1 if you are in immediate risk or danger.

How should I arrive to and leave work for the day, specifically at University Hospital, AFCH, and East Madison Hospital if I want to avoid individuals participating in the work stoppage?

Response: On a large campus like University Hospital and AFCH there are many ways staff arrive for work based on their method of transportation and parking assignment. During the work stoppage staff should park in their assigned lot and plan extra time for arriving to the workplace. Staff should continue to use their UW Health ID badge to access the building as they normally would when arriving for work.
